Hj guys, I want to ask your help.I have a small problem.I have a USB dongle duplicator.It worked great until recently.I was duplicating an SD Card with a high speed mode.The problem is that sometimes it stops copying when the copying process is 90% and then it continues to copy successfully.However, sometimes it doesn't work and the process stops without any error.Is there any solution? Answer Wiki I can't think of anything that could have caused this to occur. But, I can't think of any reasons it shouldn't work. As with anything, if the motor starts to run like crazy, have you checked for any malfunctions? If you can describe the exact error that is occurring, maybe we can think of something that will help. But, without that, I don't know if there's anything else you can do to debug. Ok I have a small problem here. I use a usb flash drive duplicator but the process stops at a high % say 90%. After that I restart the process and it stops again at high %. I have tried it with different types of SD cards. it doesn't happen all the time. What's the problem? Like about £12 in most places. Can't help you on the software. But it's a USB dongle and you can use a normal USB key to store your pics. I've been using some kind of software called 'EZ Duplicator'. You plug the USB key in to your PC and the program scans the drive in question, then copies the files to another drive. Is that not what you require? P.S. I noticed you gave a 'few' GBs. 82157476af
